One Thing Going On

Cooking Together - Recipes for Immigration Justice Work

Religious professionals and lay leaders are invited to share, create and adapt faith development materials to help congregations faithfully consider and respond to immigration justice issues, whether or not they will be sending delegates to Phoenix for GA 2012. Through this project, we will collect and organize what has already been developed by congregations, districts, and staff groups, and create new resources where there are gaps. "Cooking Together" includes both a blog, where folks can talk about particular resources, and a web page offering a growing library of resources for Worship, Theological Reflection, Religious Education, and Faithful Witness for people of all ages and life stages. The blog is the "kitchen" where all are invited to experiment with particular resources and put ideas into the simmer pot, and the web page is the "banquet table," with resources for congregations of all sizes and kinds to sample. To find out more, read the first weekly post. Join the cooking and the conversation; we think you will find it a welcoming place to be!
