Come Sing a Song with Me

Carolyn McDade was inspired to write her first song at the piano one evening after her three young daughters had gone to bed. She named it "Come, Daughter." A feminist and social activist, McDade calls singing an act of courage. After making music with others for decades she says, "I now name myself a woman of faith seeking with others to touch what matters."

“With simplified arrangements of songs selected from both UUA hymnbooks, Come Sing a Song with Me provides a welcome and effective approach to making UU music more accessible. Children who are learning to read music, as well as novice adult musicians, can now make these songs their very own. What better way to encourage more inclusive—and frequent—group singing!”

—Joyce Poley, composer, “One More Step”

“This collection of child-friendly hymns for use with intergenerational worship is just what religious educators have been seeking. The brief comments on the songs enrich old favorites and introduce new selections that are bound to become favorites. This songbook is perfect not only for helping children sing along in church but also for helping families to connect to their faith and extend the religious experience for their children into the home.”

—Michelle Richards, author, Come Into the Circle: Worshiping with Children
